

American Bedouin

Seventeen year old American Vivi James gave up texting for milking camels and sheep. She traded her skin tight jeans for a heavy, dark Burqa and sacrificed her hair dryer for frizzy, unkempt hair tucked away in a shrouded veil-all for the love of Doumin Hassan, a Bedouin boy she met in Israel. Nineteen year old Doumin Hassan has never been to a restaurant, a dance club, or even high school, yet he eats the most deliciously prepared foods, dances passionately and could read and speak in two languages. If only he hadn't fallen in love with Vivi, it was not going to bode well with his two wives. Culture shock can be electrifying. For Vivi and Doumin, the sparks only intensified as they audaciously attempted to live life in each other's world.

AMERICAN BEDOUIN boldly explores life outside of the newsroom borders. The essence of humanity is poignantly observed by two young people caught in the middle of religious, political and cultural strife as they try to make sense of it all in war-torn Middle East.
